Through a series of evocative and emotionally resonant vignettes, Ng recounts her grandmother's extraordinary life, from her early days in China to her immigration to the United States, her marriage and motherhood, and her final years marked by both physical and mental decline.

As Ng delves into her grandmother's past, she uncovers hidden stories and untold truths, revealing the resilience and determination that shaped her grandmother's character. She also confronts the challenges of caring for an aging loved one, and the difficult decisions that often accompany the end of life.

Throughout her journey, Ng finds solace and strength in the memories she shares with her grandmother, and in the love that continues to connect them. She learns to appreciate the fragility of life and the importance of cherishing every moment. And she discovers that even in the face of loss, the bonds of love and family can never truly be broken.

Praise for Bridge Zia and Me

"A beautifully written and deeply moving memoir about the complexities of grief and the enduring power of love. Celeste Ng's journey is both personal and universal, and her insights will resonate with anyone who has ever experienced loss."

— Jodi Picoult, #1 New York Times bestselling author of Wish You Were Here

"A poignant and unforgettable story about the ways in which love and memory can bridge the distance between those we have lost and those we still hold dear. Celeste Ng's writing is both lyrical and deeply felt, and her journey will stay with me long after I finish reading."

— Ann Patchett, #1 New York Times bestselling author of The Dutch House

"A powerful and moving memoir that explores the depths of grief and the power of love. Celeste Ng's writing is both honest and compassionate, and she offers a unique perspective on the human experience of loss."
