Chapter 1: The Causes of Relationships

Evolutionary Perspectives

EVOLUTIONARY PERSPECTIVE

-seeks to identify behavior in today's humans that is the result of our genetic inheritance from our ancestors.

* grew out of the work of Charles Darwin who argued in The Origin of the Species that a process of natural selection creates traits in a species that are adaptive to their environment

* argues that our genetic inheritance determines not only such physical traits as skin and eye color, but certain personality traits and social behaviors

From an evolutionary standpoint, relationships serve several key purposes:

- Survival: Relationships provide support and protection, increasing the chances of survival in a challenging environment.
- Reproduction: Relationships facilitate the creation and rearing of offspring, ensuring the continuation of the species.
- Social bonding: Relationships form a sense of community and belonging, which is essential for human well-being.

Social and Cultural Influences

Relationships are also shaped by social and cultural factors:

- Family structure: The family in which we grow up sets the foundation for our understanding of relationships.
- Social norms: Cultural expectations influence our beliefs and behaviors regarding relationships.
- Economic factors: Socioeconomic status can impact access to resources and opportunities that influence relationship formation.

Love, Intimacy, and Attachment

How To Approach Someone Who Has Strong Fearful Avoidant Attachment Tendencies

Created by @silykhoucasian

~Educate yourself about this attachment style so you don't take certain triggers (as) personally

~Make a genuine effort to (heartfully) understand your partner's fears and concerns

~Understand that your partner's "anxiety" can get triggered as you get closer to them

~Gently support your partner to get on one therapeutic support if possible

~Set loving but firm boundaries if your partner makes "threats" to leave the relationship

~Reassure your partner that you love them for who they "are" and not because of what they can "do"
